The idea is to create a new government bureau to be called a Consumer Protection Agency. One of its chief duties would be to publicize and promote legal action with regard to all the faults in products and services committed by companies, including management and all of the persons employed in the plants, stores and other workshops of the nation.

For example, the new agency would receive all custome complaints and put them on public display. It would be empowered to demand private company data and the files of other federal agencies to obtain complaints for public display. Reports would be written, press releases ssued, federal actions started, private lawsuits encouraged -all to get nationwide publicity critical of companies, heir products, and their operations.

What could companies look forward to? Lost confidence, lost customers, lost sales, and lost respect in their communities and adustries. Also, there would be lost products, lost production time, and lost money, time and alent fighting public and legal battles.

What could consumers look forward to? Higher prices and taxes. What can employees look forward to? Lost jobs. "Consumerism" as a voluntary, do-your-own-thing movement may be keeping those who provide goods and services on their toes. But, putting consumer advocates on the federal payroll with power to condemn products, ruin sales, raise prices and kill jobs is "protection" we can do without

Taxpayers Ask IRS

This column of questions and answers on federal tax matters is provided by the local office of the U.S. Internal Revenue Service and is published as a public service to taxpayers. The column answers questions most frequently asked by taxpayers.

1972, single employees earning up to $25,000 a year and with earnings up to $31,000 a year, can generally xpect to have their full tax withheld. Wage earners should deermine if it is necessary to file a new withholding exemp-tion certificate (Form W-4) to avoid overwithholding and unnecessary reductions in take-home pay. Specifically, employees should (1) claim the withholding exemp-

Q) I was out on strike last spring. Do I have to pay tax on the strike benefits I re-ceived then?

A) Yes, strike benefits are taxable, unless the facts clearly show they were intended as a gift. See IRS Publication 525, Taxable In-come and Nontaxable Income,

The Elba Clipper was low bidder on publishing the List Of Qualified Voters this year, a fact in which we take a certain amount of pride. However, we do have mixed emotions on the matter. In the past, for as far back as anyone involved remembers, the poll list has been published in a newspaper on both sides of Coffee County. One newspaper got paid for the work and divided the profits with the other. Due to conflicts in Enterprise this year we all had to "butt with our own heads." This resulted in a much cheaper price but it was at the expense of those it is intended to serve, namely -THE PEOPLE because this year it will be published only for the 2350 people who read The Elba Clipper while those in Enterprise can only wonder if they are listed as voters. You have probably made or heard the statement, "Teen-agers have certainly changed since the time I was growing up." On the other hand parents and adults have changed, in many instances, as much if not more, than teen-agers have changed. This is one of the reasons I obtained this series of articles for multipleadors. icles for publication in an effort to communicate with as many parents as possible. The title of this series could just as easily be changed to "Let's walk About Parents."

"Dig" That Crany Music
I hope all the followers of this column will excuse the use of the "mod" term in today's title, but I felt I had to use it to get myself in the mood to talk about this subject. First of all you're going to want to know what possible association there might be between teenage music and law enforcement. In law enforcement there is a "thing" called disturbing the peace. I think every officer, sometime in his career, has been on a call resulting from a complaint from a neighbor of a person who is making too much noise, usually late at night. Often these calls involve record players being turned up too loud and frequently it is found that the "culprit" is a teenager listening to his type of music and wanting to share it with neighbors as far away as possible. Many times we find that the teen's parents are away from home. To understand this one must first accept the fact that, in order for a teen to appreciate music of any kind the volume must be turned up as high as it will go . . . until the windows rattle . . . the doors vibrate . . . and the neighbors are driven "up the wall."

To most parents the modern music popular among our teens is not dissimilar in its effect on our personal tranquility than a large dose of cathartic taken on an empty stomach two hours where around the time a youngster turns 13 he is usu ally attacked by some strange music "bug." Once so attacked he is privileged to enjoy a type of music dating back to the stone age when men beat on rocks with sticks to make some kind of noise to break the silence. It should be remembered that, at this point in a child's life, he is trying to break the home ties subconsciously. And, at this time I suppose, if his parents show outward signs of disgust for his new found entertainment, he makes his first mental break-away from parental control. If his parent's dislike the type of music he likes he finds a measure of identity with others who like the things that he likes, including music. To this I say FINE . . . the new teen needs to find certain identity out away from mom and dad, a little at a time, as he can handle it. Some parents get into a big squabble with the teen about his type of music and many even forbid it being played in the home while parents are present. I'd like to say ahmen to this, but I can't. I actually think if parents can learn to tolerate the teen music our teens will spend more time at home, bring friends to the home more often, and generally feel more "at home" in the home. You and both know this should lead only to a better relationship with the teen during his difficult to-get-along-with years. Now, as to control of music volume in the home, which seems to be the main factor in the parent-teen uproar over music. I feel that the teen should learn right from the beginning that his music cannot dominate the entire household. I short, if he learns that the volume must be kept at what the rest of the family feels is normal level, then he will enjoy the privileges of the music he likes. If he insists on turning it up until it fills the entire house and it drives adults crazy, then perhaps a week without music privilege will instill in his mind that normal level means NORMAL LEVEL. Also, the teen should learn that when mom and dad leave to go out this is not a signal that all rules do not apply for that period of time. If this department has to come out to tell him to turn his music down it will be no laughing matter, I can assure him It would seem, after all, that control of teen music habits is just like everything else in raising teens; the rule must be made and the teen must be made to understand the rule must be followed, no matter how many times you have to go over it. Violations of rules should carry a punishment because that is the way a person learns that rules MUST be followed. We in this department want you to know that we appreciate what you are going through while raising your teens and we will always help make your job easier whenever we can. We solicit your cooperation with this department where teens are involved to make local law enforcement a smooth functioning process and an accepted way of life. Such cooperation will make your teen's growing up years much more enjoyable and a fond memory when he is an adult Next week: The No-Good" Kid Down the Street,

Let's talk . . . ABOUT OUR TEENS By Jack Brunson

You have probably made or heard the statement, Teen-agers have certainly changed since the time I was growing up." On the other hand parents and adults have changed, in many instances, as much if not more, than teen-agers have changed. This s one of the reasons I obtained this series of articles for publication in an effort to communicate with as many parents as possible. The title of this series could just as easily be changed to "Let's,

The "No Goud" Ille Down the Street What makes a person eligible for the old fashioned term, "he's just no good?" Does it take one arrest, two, three how many would you say? Or, would you say he came from a family of "no goods" if indeed his father had been arrested and had spent some time in jail? I wonder how many that have actually been encouraged to go down the wrong path of life by people referring to them as "no good" in conversation with others? Too frequently one will overhear a conversation among adults about so and so being just "no good." Or another statement heard quite often is trouble with the law," These are DAMAGING WORDS! The old fashioned idea that if a police car ever drove up in front of your house and an officer came in to talk to you, your reputa tion was from then on and forever runed is pure and utter NONSENSE! I ray be happy and pleased that your law enproblem. If someone in the family is arrested for something he has done wrong don't turn your back on him! He's still jus as much a member of your family as before. If at all possible, help him get straightened out at once. Or, if he must be pur ished by our laws in some manner for something he has done wrong help him to accept it as a helpful and corrective measure, as it surely is meant to be. out having friends and relatives turn their back on you! And, to tag a teen with the "no good" title may cause irrepairable than he has done previously in his start down the wrong path of life. It takes kindness, understanding and a FIRM HAND of control to change anyone from a poor start in life. Surely further degrading the person with a poor choice of words cannot possibly be of help Here are some of the reasons given law enforcement officers, taken from a national survey on teen arrests, as to why the teen broke the law: These are answers directly from the teen offenders when asked the question, "why did you commit this offense?" . i. Nobody likes me anyway ody says I'm no good, I guess they're right

6. If you want to know, ask my parents, they know why These simple answers, along with many others like them, some hardly related to the questions asked, give quite an insight into the life and thinking of teenagers who get into trouble. That is why we know there is so much more to law enforcement with relation to teens than just enforcement and punish

3. I can't help myself, everything is io is wrong

It parents cooperate with law enforcement agencies and help to build faith in and friendship with law and order, we will all prove together that the truly "no-goods" are few and far Let's all look for the "SOME GOOD" in every teenager and take the time and spend the effort necessary to develop it. We in this department are constantly striving to handle teen problems in such a manner that offenders will be better people at the conclusion of their "brush with the law." The national Democratic Party is apparently in shambles. At first it appeared Senator Muskie was their front runner, won't come crying to the front door of The Clipper as he did in New Hampshire when an editor was critical of him but then he has made two well publicized performances that tell me he is almost as weak as his former running mate HHH! His performance following his poor showing in Florida stripped the last shread of respect I could ever have for him. The only bad thing I see is the wide open door it leaves for Teddy Kennedy to step in and take over the Democratic party four years from now.

We had a stopped-up sewer at The Elba Clipper last week and ofter our service man dug up our lines, he discovered the trouble was in a City line out under the street. The City crew quickly cleaned out the line from the manhole but ir the afternoon we found it was still not working right. A call to city hall quickly brought them back with the digging machine and the problem was solved. This is their job and is just what I would expect them to do next time and in any town. However, the very noticeable thing (and greatly appreciated) was the fact that Mr. J. C. Stuckey and Charlie Johnson worked an hour and a half or more overtime to complete the job and fill the hole. They were very conge and when we apologized for them having towork overtime their modest answer made us feel they were glad to be of service.
